Video calls have become a regular part of life for many our – whether it's checked in with the boss of the office or keeping in touch with relatives on the other side of the world, apps like FaceTime, Duo and Skype have become a faithful companion to modern life. Here we are going to focus on Microsoft's Skype specifically (although some of these tips apply to other applications): goodbye crashes and freezes and learn about some of the program features you may never have known about our collection of expertly picked Skype tips.1. Pre-record video messages Did you know you could preload video calls with Skype? It works a bit like visual voicemail and can be convenient if you're in different time zones with the person you're trying to reach (or you're just a little shy). Right-click any contact in the desktop version of Skype and select Send a video message to save the clip. You'll see a preview of the webcam channel, and then you can press The Save button for up to three minutes to capture the clip. Make sure you're seen and heard before you're checking your next Skype video (or audio) call before you're ready to check your system settings - open the Tools menu, click Options, and then, under Audio settings and video settings, you can tweak setup. From the brightness and contrast of your webcam video feed to the default microphone volume, there are plenty of ways to play it so that the other party can see and hear you properly.3. Use Skype Chat, And take a picture of the miracle with your contacts in the Skype text conversation section, you can also control the program. A complete list of supported commands is available online, including app security, notifications, and more. For example, try typing /kick [name] to kick someone out of a group chat or /find [text] to look back at the history of the conversation. Typing /showplaces, meanwhile, lists all devices you're currently signed in to. One of the latest features added to Skype's mobile apps is the ability to share your location with your contacts – convenient if you're trying to meet someone or just want to show your trip around the world. You can find the location view in the media bar (with icons for pictures, files, etc. in the chat window). Tap the icon and the map pops up – you can send any place you want, not just where you currently are.5. Use multiple windows for multiple conversationsIf you want to keep multiple conversations with multiple contacts, Skype will include windows specifically split for that purpose. This is on the View menu and gives each contact a separate window. Of course, you can't make multiple audio and video calls at once in Skype, but you can use this split window mode to make instant messaging easier to type and send files to more than one person at a time.6. Call directly from the webSkype click call plug-in, which works with Internet Explorer, Google Chrome and Mozilla Firefox, automatically highlight phone numbers on the web and let's call them Skype click. You'll need skype credit to connect, unless the number in question is free, but it's a useful feature. As an additional bonus, you can use the plug-in to send the number to your phone too. One Skype feature that you may not have yet happened is screen sharing - if you want to demo someone for some reason, it's perfect, and now it works in group chats. Search for, click, click, and then select Share screens from the pop-up menu. You can share the entire screen or only a specific window and stop at any time.8. Answer calls automaticallyIf you want to save yourself, if you want to click or tap a key to answer a Skype call, you can set the program automatically: select Tools, then select Options, and then select Show advanced options under Calls and Call settings. You can limit automatic response to calls from existing contacts, and if you're smart, you can set it up at home on your laptop and use it for Skype to keep an eye on your pets or living room (because the video starts automatically).9. Use your bandwidth wiselyOnOn Your home (or office) for the upcoming connection will have limited power. If you plan to launch Skype, it makes sense to shut down Netflix, Spotify and anything else that can chew data. Of course, this is more appropriate for you with slower broadband, but no matter what the speed of your connection is, you want to maximize the amount of bandwidth available during your Skype call.10. Try the next version of Skype If you have a Windows 10 Anniversary Update installed, you can try Skype Preview, a redesigned version of the desktop app that's more narrowly integrated with the operating system and includes a new new look. Skype Preview should be found on the Start menu. Comes with a selection of light or dark themes, and one of the other improvements is notifications – can you respond directly to pop-up notifications in Windows 10.Time to upgrade your hardware?
